

Welcome to BookExpo & Bookcon 2017

Dear Industry Colleague:

BookExpo and the Combined Book Exhibit welcome you to the 13th Annual Bookexpo/Bookcon New Title Showcase. We are proud to present a large selection of titles and publishers and the New Title Showcase is the perfect vehicle to bring some of those titles and publishers to your attention.

We are pleased that you have taken the time to visit this special exhibit that attracted thousands of attendees at this year's conference. We invite you to peruse the titles and publishers on display. For those publishers who do not have a booth on the show floor, this catalog provides you with their company contact and other relevant information so you can contact them after the show has ended.

We are also pleased to present an ebook display within the New Title Showcase. Attendees can review the ebooks on display with a look-inside feature.

Please take this catalog with our compliments, and keep it along with your BE/BC Show Directory as a record of what you saw, and whom you visited at the 2017 show. At the conclusion of show, this catalog will be available on the BookExpo Web site (www.Bookexpoamerica.com), and the Combined Book Exhibit web site (www.combinedbook.com) in pdf format. The titles will also be available on the New Title Showcase searchable database at www.NewTitleShowcase.com. Some of the titles included in the New Title Showcase database will have a "look inside the book" feature as well.

Once again, thank you for visiting this year's exhibit, and we hope you have a successful and rewarding experience at this year's show.

When he snatched the girl from Gina years ago, he had planned to abandon her in some orphanage so Gina could never find her, but he could not do that. At first, he tried to raise her as his daughter, teaching her everything he knew. He wanted her to be like him, but over time, the beauty of the young girl became overwhelming. He had never stopped loving Gina, and when Gi became a woman, he lost control completely and ended up making her his own. She was his property. Susanne Kessaris shares rich memories from her childhood spending happy summers with her grandparents. They modeled frugality and contentment through simple pastimes and activities. The book's title recalls the hours she spent making checkerboard quilt squares with her grandmother.

Susanne's childhood was filled with many adventures: exploring jungle attractions in southern Florida, hunting for treasures in her grandparents' basement, bug and bird-watching explorations as well as plant identification forays in her grandparents' garden. Her imagination expanded through such creative playtimes.

Memories of these special times awoke the author's passion to raise awareness of how our modern overemphasis on technology has begun to affect relational and developmental growth in children. Her book offers activity ideas for children as an alternative to the use of digital gadgets for entertainment. In this "memory collage," she shares some of her many exploits through her gift of storytelling.

Author Susanne Kessaris knew from the miraculous births of her children that God was speaking to her early on about letting go, but like most parents, she wanted to cling tightly and was not prepared for the day they grew up. In Bagpipes, Planes, and Strings, she talks about how she fought to surrender to God's will through a series of events. First, she had a scary ordeal with skin cancer. A few short years later, she found herself facing an emergency hysterectomy. Next, she struggled to release her daughter to pursue a calling to go on a mission in South America. She later lost her father to congestive heart failure. When her family decided to sell their house and move, she was finally willing to let go and realize that God had strengthened her to face her life challenges one step at a time. Bagpipes, Planes, and Strings refers to sounds that will forever stir Susanne's soul and remind her of each of her painful journeys of letting go. Her inspiring story of grace and faith challenges you to embrace God, the only constant you have when your world is falling apart around you and the future seems hopeless and out of reach.

Imagine You Were a Hen, a Goat, or...

Anny Fassler

Children to Learn Animals through Imagination

Author invites parents and guardians to share the beauty of nature to the young ones with this children's book

By nature, children love animals. Author Anny Fassler knows this firsthand with having raised three children and now with her six grandchildren. To help parents and guardians educate the young ones, to open their minds and pique their interest in animals and nature, the author brings forth "Imagine You Were a Hen, a Goat, or..." Children are naturally curious and eager to learn. So, the author hopes that the pictures, rhymes, and lessons in this children's book will feed and nurture their curiosity and eagerness.

Children might wonder about animals and are eager to learn about them. They might also ponder what it is like to be a particular animal, where they live and what they eat. This book gives answer to these questions.

Children like to imagine. They wonder what it's like to be another being for just a little while, and while doing this, they learn about a particular animal and will also get to like it, no matter what type of animal or insect it may be.

The book will not only amuse children, but will also educate them about animals and the wonders of nature in general. It will take them on an imaginary trip to be something entirely different from what they are now. It's a fun experience while learning about animals.

God Does Laugh: A Life Interrupted

Trebor Fairwell

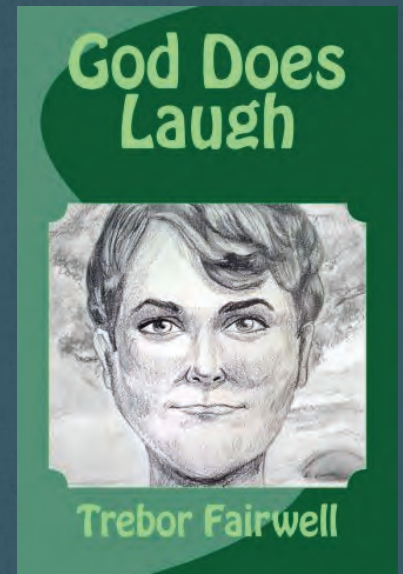

There is always joy to be found beneath sadness. If God chastises those whom he loves, then everyone can find God's love behind one's pain. In author Trebor Fairwell's "God Does Laugh: A Life Interrupted," he hopes to help young people discover the importance of following God's will, wherever it might lead. It shows that even in the most trying circumstances, God guides a person's path.

To some, God chooses to reveal his everlasting and unconditional mercy. To others, God lays bare his inscrutable justice. To author Trebor Fairwell, God reveals his divine sense of humor. Through a series of unforgettable events, the author shares his experience of God's comedic timing and well-intentioned providence. As God's plan for Fairwell's life unfolds, it is clear, without a doubt, that God most certainly does laugh.

Trebor Fairwell only wants to do God's will. Very early on, he commits himself wholeheartedly to the guiding hand of providence. But God's loving hand leads him along a winding path full of embarrassments, disappointments, and falls. As he stumbles along this road, he can sense God's laughter in it all, revealing that God himself is not far away. Whether it be chasing possessed rodents across a French garden, or entertaining Death himself, his perspective in life provides insight into the light-hearted nature of a God who only wants what will bring happiness and peace.

Intent on giving his life to God through the ministry, he discovers that God does laugh when one makes plans. The life meant for Mr. Fairwell, was not the life Mr. Fairwell first set out to pursue. In order to obey the designs of God, he will end up in the most unlikely of places: Jail.

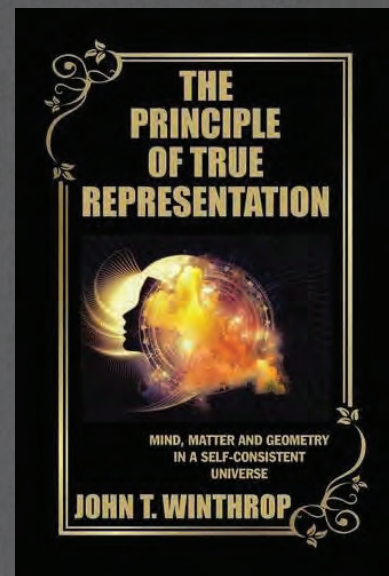

"I hope to present this book as message to those who are lost and looking for God's will in their life, as well as a message of hope to those whose failings lead them down the path of depression. This book is all about finding the silver lining," shares the author.

The Principle of True Representation

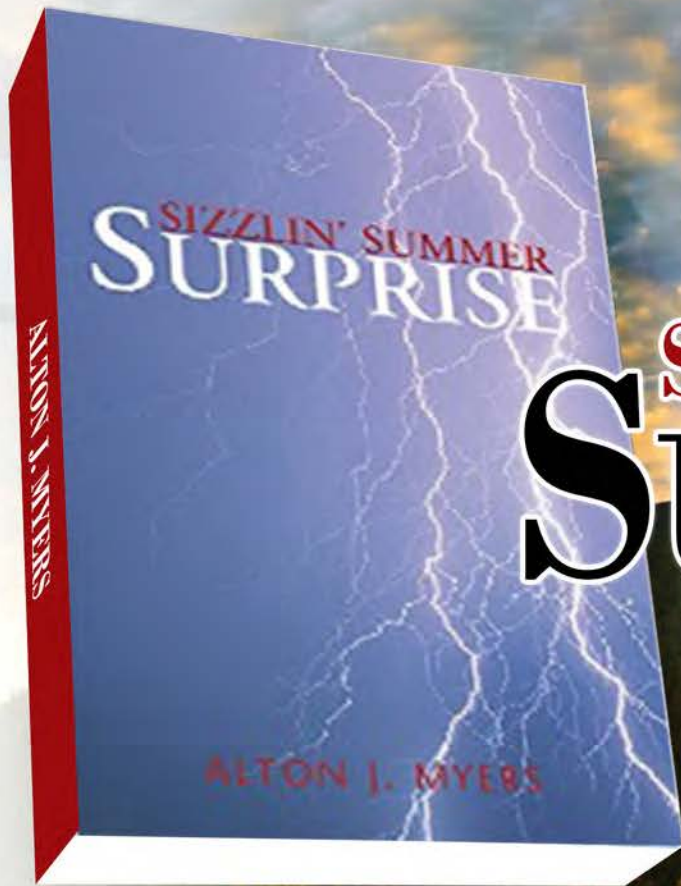

John T. Winthrop

The prevailing scientific paradigm known as philosophical materialism asserts that the world everyone knows and observes consists of nothing but matter and its interactions. But materialism makes no predictions of its own and so is unfalsifiable and, ironically, unscientific. The principle disclosed in author John Winthrop's "The Principle of True Representation", in its role as a criterion of truth, exposes not a few errors of fact and interpretation in the foundations of physics and science of mind, errors attributable to blind adherence to materialism. These include, among other things, (1) the structure and dimensionality of spacetime, (2) the existence (or not) of the graviton, (3) the origin and values of the masses of the fundamental particles, including that of the neutrino, (4) the origin of cosmic expansion and (5) the reality of free will.

Typically, in the tradition of scientific method, conjectured physical laws, such as Newton's law of gravitation, are inspired by observation of the natural world. Observations, however, are not physical facts, but mere representations of the facts, appearances derived from instrument readings and sense impressions. Consequently, one can never be sure how close the representations come to the truth. Physics as conventionally practiced thus remains ever provisional and subject to refinement in the light of new observational data.

Departing from tradition, this book undertakes to identify the very source of physical law, with a view to explaining why there are any laws at all and why they have the forms they do. The first step is to treat the representation of a fact the external world as a received message in the sense of communication theory. The second step is to demand exact correspondence between the external fact and its representation. On combining the two, one arrives at an eigenvalue equation for the description of the natural world. This is the Law of Laws, so-called because upon geometrization, it yields both known and testable new laws governing the behavior the quantum micro-world and the universe at large. Remarkably, geometrization of the Law of Laws reveals the presence of four extra dimensions, all flat and invisible. In the context of this extended spacetime, a number of formerly intractable problems in foundational physics become suddenly open to resolution; these include the nature of dark matter; the cosmological constant problem; quantum non-locality; mind-body interaction and free will.

Fate Line: A Graphological Murder Mystery

Marc Seifer

Fresh from the successes of the first three books in the “Rudy Styne Quadrilogy,” author Marc Seifer now continues the series with the release of the fourth book, Fate Line: A Graphological Murder Mystery. In this next installment, reporter Rudy Styne covers a story that will take him to the dark and dangerous sides of Utah and back to New York City, where kidnapping, murder, and cover-ups are meshed in a conflicting and complex tale.

Handwriting expert and Holocaust survivor Jacob Bruno has his life take a fateful turn on a routine case when asked to restrict testimony, yet swear an oath to God to tell the whole truth. Conflicted, the old graphologist takes on the haughty Judge Wellingham and pays a big price: put in jail for contempt of court.

In covering this lightning-rod case, Modern Times ace reporter, Rudy Styne, expects it to become a cover story, when out of nowhere, a nine-year-old up-and-coming ice skater and cover-girl darling, Jay Jay Martin, is kidnapped from her home in Bountiful Utah. With a hundred reporters flocking to the state, and the court story pushed to the back burner, Rudy requests to join the herd, particularly when it is revealed that there is a ransom note implicating the ice skater’s father, corporate megastar, Skipper Martin. Who else would be best to compare the father’s handwriting to the ransom note than Jacob Bruno?

This dizzyingly engaging tale involves a love affair between palm reader Max Minkowski and young graphologist and protégé Sarah Calloway; an incest cult atmosphere in Utah; a psychic troupe touring the Northeast; another forgery case that leads to manslaughter involving Jacob Bruno, and so much more. Can Rudy Styne help solve these cases? Readers are about to find out.

The author invites readers to seek out and read the full set of the “Rudy Styne Quadrilogy”: Rasputin’s Nephew (Book I), Doppelganger (Book II), Crystal Night (Book III), and Fate Line (Book IV).
